The Five Dysfunctions of a Team

Patrick Lencioni - 2002

Moving beyond silos and me doing my thing, to being one team focused on group results

Holding ourselves & one another to account for agreed actions, behaviours & results

Committing as a team because we've all stated our case – agree & commit, disagree and commit

Open, honest, constructive debate to cover all the options and get everything on the table

Feeling safe to be vulnerable in front of colleagues
- to admit doubts, mistakes, to ask for help
